(Ruth Darling, CVFPB; Mary Jimenez and Jason Sidley, Department of Water Resources)

Presentation of content included in the Public Draft 2022 CVFPP Update. The CVFPP is California's strategic framework for reducing flood risk in the Central Valley, which has among the highest flood risks in the nation. California's rapidly changing climate is increasing flood risk across the state. More intense swings from record dry to record wet conditions mean flooding can happen at any time. The increased frequency and magnitude of wildfires in California also increases the risk for dangerous flood conditions. This iteration of the CVFPP has been updated with a focus on climate resilience, performance tracking, and integration and alignment with other State water management plans.
